Conference Background

International Council of Nurses believes that nurses, as part of a multidisciplinary team, can instill health systems that take into account the social, economic, cultural and political determinants of health leading to positive impact on health care services delivery.

Nurses all over the world are advocating for Health for All in the most challenging circumstances with limited resources to deliver health care to those most in need. Nurses, who are closest to the patient, are in the position to bring their voices to the policy makers for the best possible solutions. Nurses can address health inequalities, through refocusing on health promotion and illness prevention, using a population health approach, in order to improve the health of everyone everywhere. (Annedtte Kennedy, President, ICN. 2019)

The World Health Assembly has designated 2020 the International Year of the Nurse and the Midwife in a year-long effort to celebrate the work of nurses and midwives, highlight the challenging conditions they often face, and advocate for increased investments in the nursing and midwifery workforce. (WHO Campaigns/Year of the Nurse and the Midwife 2020)
